(Count 3)

Preamble

1. The United States, Thailand, and approximately 170 other countries are signatories to a multilateral treaty called the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora, 27 U.S.T. 1087, T.I.A.S. 8249 (commonly referred to as "the CITES treaty" or "the Convention"). The CITES treaty provides a mechanism for regulating international trade in species whose survival is considered threatened by trade. By agreement of the parties, such species are listed on "appendices," depending on the level of protection needed for the species. International trade in species listed on these appendices (and their body parts or

1 products made therefrom) is monitored and regulated by permits and quotas. The 2 permit restrictions apply to live and dead specimens, as well as the skins, parts and 3 products made in whole or in part from a listed species.

4 2. Wildlife species in danger of extinction and which are, or may be, affected by 5 trade (tigers, pandas, elephants and all species of sea turtles, for example) are listed on 6 Appendix I of CITES. CITES allows very limited trade in Appendix I species for 7 scientific and research purposes, and only if the specimen is lawfully acquired and a 8 valid "foreign export permit" issued by the specimen's country of origin (or a valid 9 "foreign re-export certificate" issued by the country of re-export), as well as a valid 10 "import permit" from the destination country, are obtained prior to shipping any such 11 wildlife from one country to another. International trade in Appendix I species for 12 "primarily commercial purposes" is prohibited.

13 3. Listed on Appendix II of CITES are species not necessarily threatened with 14 extinction, but in which trade must be controlled in order to avoid utilization 15 incompatible with their survival. International trade in these species (or skins or 16 products made from them) for commercial purposes is allowed, but only if a valid 17 "foreign export permit" issued by the specimen's country of origin (or a valid "foreign 18 re-export certificate" issued by the country of re-export) is obtained prior to the 19 shipment. The Rhesus Macaque (macaca mullata) described below is subject to the 20 Appendix II permit requirements.

21 4. The CITES treaty is implemented in the United States by the Endangered
22 Species Act of 1973 (the "ESA"), which directs the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service
23 ("USFWS") to administer the treaty. 16 U.S.C. 1537a, 1540(f). The ESA makes it 24 unlawful to knowingly "trade in any specimen contrary to the provisions of [CITES], or 25 to possess any specimen traded contrary to the provisions of [CITES]." 16 U.S.C. §§ 26 1538(c)(1), 1540(b)(1). "Trade," in this context, includes importation into the United 27 States. The USFWS has promulgated extensive regulations incorporating the specific 28

1 permit requirements and provisions of CITES and listing the species contained on the 2 CITES appendices. 50 C.F.R. Part 23.

3 5. The Rhesus Macaque (mucaca mullata) has been listed under CITES
4 Appendix II since April 4, 1977. 50 CFR Part 23.

5 6. In addition to the requirements of CITES and the ESA, federal law generally 6 requires that all wildlife, including rhesus macaques, or parts thereof, must be declared
7 to the United States Customs Service at the port of first arrival in the United States. 19
8 C.F.R. § 148.11. When importing any wildlife, importers or their agents must file with 9 the USFWS a completed Declaration for Importation or Exportation of Fish and 10 Wildlife. 50 C.F.R. § 14.61. A USFWS or United States Customs Service officer must 11 clear (or refuse) wildlife being imported into the United States, and the importer or his 12 agent must make available to the officer the wildlife being imported, as well as all 13 required permits, licenses or other documents. 50 C.F.R. § 14.52.
